

UK's Human Rights Report Card Marked

Joint Statement of UK Civil Society Organisations following the Universal Periodic Review of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland 15 November 2022

On Thursday 10 November member states of the UN Human Rights Council called on the UK Government to take action to better realise rights in the UK during the 'Universal Periodic Review', i particularly for disabled people, children, women, Black and other racialised groups, migrants and those seeking asylum.

The review highlighted a wide range of areas where the UK Government is failing to meet its international legal obligations including:

- Deep concerns that the 'Rights Removal Bill' will undermine the protections and remedies provided by the Human Rights Act 1998 and the European Convention on Human Rights
- The rights of children. Specific recommendations were made to:
 - Develop a child rights action plan

- Raise the age of criminal responsibility to at least 14
- End detention of children in adult prisons, solitary confinement, and racial disproportionality in the youth justice system

- Ensure unaccompanied asylum-seeking children have their family unification rights respected
- The incompatibility of the Migration and Economic Development Partnership with Rwanda, which will see asylum seekers expelled to Rwanda, with the UK's obligations, including under the 1951 Refugee Convention
- Rising levels of poverty, including food insecurity and access to adequate housing, with the particular effects this has on children and disabled people.
- Rising hate crime levels across the UK, including in relation to disabled people, women, people of colour and in relation to religious background
- Discrimination faced by Trans people in the UK in the realisation of a large range of their rights
- The need to bring international human rights into domestic legislation, including the right to a clean, healthy and sustainable environment
- The removal of reservations to the Istanbul Convention to ensure adequate protection of all women and girls, including migrants, from violence

As civil society organisations across the UK we call upon the UK Government to:

- (1) accept the recommendations made during the Universal Periodic Review
- (2) take action (including legal changes) to implement recommendations made during this, and previous reviews
- (3) commit to an improved engagement with civil society and affected people (including particularly impacted groups highlighted above) during each phase of the review, including the implementation of recommendations
- (4) adopt a National Human Rights Action Plan (NHRAP), which encompasses economic, social and cultural rights, building on the good practices demonstrated in Scotland, ii which would include consistent and meaningful dialogues with civil society to ensure wider protection of human rights
- (5) establish a 'National Mechanism for Reporting and Follow-up' (NMRF) to coordinate the implementation of recommendations from the UPR and provide transparency on progress of this work
- (6) reaffirm its commitment to human rights and its international obligations, in particular by scrapping current plans to undermine the Human Rights Act by replacing it with a Rights Removal Bill and confirming its commitment to implement the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights whether interim or final.

We make these calls with the aim of working together with the UK and devolved governments in the hope of meaningful use of the Universal Periodic Review and the better protection of human rights in the UK. The UK continues to position itself as a world leader in terms of human rights and the Universal Periodic Review is an excellent opportunity to illustrate this commitment on the global stage.

Every four and a half years the UK undergoes a human rights review, called the 'Universal Periodic Review', when other member states of the Human Rights Council at the United Nations review the UK's human rights record and make recommendations.
